DUTY OF DISCLOSURE.

Before you enter into a contract of life insurance with us, you have a duty, under the Insurance Contracts Act 1984, to tell us anything you know, or could be expected to know, which could influence our decision whether to provide you with insurance cover and, if so, on what terms.

This duty continues until we agree to insure you. This means you must advise us of any changes to the information you have provided to us up until the date we confirm in writing your application has been accepted or declined.

You also have the same duty to disclose to us before you extend, vary or reinstate a contract of life insurance in the future but we will remind you again.

You don't need to tell us anything that:

- diminishes the risk to us;
- is common knowledge;
- we know or in the ordinary course of business ought to know; or
- we waive your duty to tell us about.

If an eligible person or insured member does not tell us everything he or she should have, this may be treated by us as a failure by you to tell us something that you should have.

The consequences of failing to disclose details to us.

If you fail to comply with your duty of disclosure, we may be entitled to reduce our liability under the contract. This means reducing your cover or changing it in a way that places us in the same position we would have been in had you told us.

If your non-disclosure is fraudulent, we may avoid the contract at any time. If we avoid the contract, we will not pay any claim under that contract.
